Section A
Multiple choice questions were on the whole answered well, showing a good understanding across the breadth of the subject area. A handful of students struggled, and did not quite make the pass level on this section. There was no particular area that stood out as being problematic however according to our statistical analysis.

Section B
Two questions from four were selected in this section and the students favoured the first and last, but each of the four questions were answered by at least three students (class size= 25). The mean mark for this section was quite high, with a good proportion of students attaining 70% and above. However, some students really struggled and this seems to have been from carelessness in reading what was asked or choosing to "brain dump" rather than answer the specific questions. This is a shame as students who attended the revision session were advised on exam technique and warned to keep answers on point and concise.
