There was a broad spread of marks in the exam, which is likely to have reflected participation in the team project. For example, some people demonstrated an excellent understanding of TDD, and were able to reflect in detail on how they had used it, and its advantages and disadvantages; others had not used it extensively, but understood enough about the concepts to reflect on their experience with it; a few people had clearly not used it, and did not understand the practice, leading to much lower marks.
