In general, performance was good for questions related to software architecture and code reading. For questions related to testing, estimation and the build process, performance was mixed, with some questions answered very well, and others proving more challenging. Some of the questions that received the fewest correct answers were those where topics were covered primarily in the workshops, rather than the lab.